Based on the recommendation of the High Power Committee for Economy and Administrative Reorganisation, the Government of Madras have recently issued orders imposing a cut of 7½ per cent in the Clerical (Assistants and Clerks) strength of all offices in Madras State subject to the proviso that fractions arising while working out the cut may be ignored. As such, this order will be applicable only to those offices in which the clerical strength is more than 14.

2. The total number of the Clerks and Assistants likely to be rendered surplus because of the application of the 7½ per cent cut was initially estimated at 1,200. With a view, however, to minimise the hardships likely to be caused to these surplus hands, it was ordered that only such of those surplus hands appointed after 1st October 1965 are to be retrenched straightaway, while the remaining surplus hands are to be continued in their respective positions and absorbed against future vacancies either in their own Department or elsewhere. It was also ordered that wherever special difficulties were encountered in giving effect to the cut in full, these difficulties should be reported to the Government immediately, so that the actual number to be reckoned as surplus will be settled by the Secretary concerned in consultation with the Head of Department and the Secretary, Finance Department, taking into account the special difficulties mentioned by the Head of Department. On the basis of such discussions in a number of Departments, like the Police and High Court, the number reckoned as surplus in these Departments ultimately has worked out to much less than 7½ per cent. Since on the average, about 3,500 clerks are recruited annually by the Madras Public Service Commission for filling up new posts as well as vacancies caused by retirements, promotions, etc., in the various Government offices, it will be clear that most of the staff who are listed out as surplus are likely to be absorbed against future vacancies before the end of the current year itself. Further, the Clerks who are likely to be straightaway retrenched by the implementation of the 7½ per cent cut would in most cases be the Emergency hands who would in any case have been ousted once the approved candidates of the Madras Public Service Commission become available.

3. As far as possible the surplus staff will be absorbed against vacancies arising in the Districts in which they are now serving. Lists of surplus staff are under preparation in each District and full particulars of the district wise surplus staff have not yet been collected.

4. Since most of the surplus hands will be continued in their respective positions till they are absorbed against future vacancies, the savings anticipated due to the implementation of the 7½ per cent cut would take some time to fructify fully. The present estimate of total saving that is likely to be achieved is about Rs. 20 lakhs.
